Dean Elizabeth B. Kelly
Development of individual potentiality demands understanding guidance—for Middlebury women, the source of such counsel is Dean Elizabeth B. Kelly. With wisdom and perception, she helps us to make the choices necessary in growing toward capable, conscientious adulthood. Her influence extending far beyond the administrative confines of her office, Dean Kelly actively participates in the life of the college. Whether pouring spiced tea at her home, cheering enthusiastically at a football game, or discussing current issues with college committees, she is in constant contact with students. As a small way of demonstrating our awareness of the role she plays in our lives, we proudly dedicate this book to Dean Kelly.
for all,

at MIDDLEBURY

Growth is the essence of life. From the uncompromising hardness of a seed springs the flower. Only the intermediate phase in its metamorphosis, a cocoon forms a temporary pause in the expansion of the butterfly. The protection of an eggshell is abandoned by the young eagle too large to be contained within its boundaries.

For man, however, growth involves more than physical amplification, more than mechanical cell division. The primary element is a mental maturity—the social, intellectual and spiritual awareness that is understanding. Its acquisition demands interaction of mind and environment, a process of challenge and response. In dealing with the life situation, we make the decisions which determine the character of our existence.

Middlebury is a direct and forceful challenge, diversified in its appearance to each individual. On library shelves await theories and perspectives representing the achievements of centuries. Classroom discussions require carefully interpreted analysis. Still there is more—every field taunts us with questions yet unanswered, regions yet unexplored.

Beside the door of each building shines a light, inviting us to enter and learn. This is Middlebury College—the challenge is ours.
Within this college microcosm, then, each individual has the capacity for a unique response, a personal interpretation of the potentialities for development. Dancing at a party, mingling with football crowds, attending classes, working in a fraternity group—the challenge is as varied as the possible modes of meeting it. Each social relationship, each constructive reaction to experience, each contribution to the community as a whole, carries us closer to maturity. Every one of us has the responsibility of determining the path to take.

able ADMINISTRATORS

Problems, decisions; problems, decisions. How else can one describe an administrative job? Hundreds of problems march into Old Chapel a day, and hundreds of decisions file out.

Carrying the load of student and faculty health, happiness, and security are the deans. Situations ranging from misunderstandings to serious academic difficulties are discussed over their desks with insight and sympathy. Responsibility to the college, the trustees, the faculty, the students and their families, makes the position of dean one of paramount importance on campus.

There are problems too which concern college administration — the financial difficulties of an expanding student body and changing requirements for a liberal arts school. These also are wisely met, to keep Middlebury at its high intellectual level.

"A study of man in his cultural manifestations" is the expressed aim of the humanities department. A definition as broad as this must be made to link together the varied courses found therein, for they extend from Chaucer to Christianity, from Choral Music to Kant.

In investigating and expressing man’s need for creativity, the humanities continue beyond historical fact and figure, penetrating the larger meaning of life. Although the outer garments of musical, artistic, and literary style may have national overtones, the truths beneath exist for all people and all time. An intangible quality of oneness with humanity emerges from the study of the esthetic expression of others. Art, music, and literature show the similarity of intellectual strivings and emotional needs which exist beneath external differences — a pathway to understanding the peoples of the world, an invaluable phase of education.

comprise centuries of thought

As a translation of this concept of the humanities from the theoretical to the specific, what do we find at Middlebury? The English and American Literature departments offer opportunities to study specific contributions of the people who have made the greatest impact on our own civilization. Lest our outlook be too narrow, however, we explore the realms of philosophy, religion, world art and literature, representing centuries of achievements of all peoples. Students of art, music, drama and composition are given the occasion for creative expression.
as well as for studying the esthetic expressions of others.

To guide us through this maze, we are fortunate enough to have a faculty which combines knowledge with forceful personality and stimulates our interest by its enthusiasm.

To instill in us a desire to seek man’s humanity — his creative genius — is the goal of the humanities. What better way to spend four years at Middlebury?
FOREIGN LANGUAGES

promote world understanding

FRENCH—Anne Baudement, Edith Lepelley, Stephen A. Freeman, Fernand Marty, Jacqueline Thibault.
Believing in language proficiency as a basis for world understanding, Middlebury's language department has long been a leader in its field. The College provides opportunities and facilities for language study still unexcelled by any school in the country.

Adapting the different techniques and tools of language study to student needs — be these proficiency in speaking, cultural knowledge, or scientific aids — Middlebury offers instruction in five modern and two ancient languages: French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish, Greek and Latin.

The Summer School sessions are internationally known for more concentrated work. In addition, students may receive a Master of Arts degree from Middlebury's Graduate Schools — of French in Paris, of Spanish in Madrid. Unique in offering a modern language Doctorate, Middlebury is proudly maintaining its high rank in this constantly expanding field.
"Studies of society as an organism or as a group of interrelated, interdependent persons . . . ." The social sciences classify and clarify 1,700,000 years of man's intellectual and physical development.

Social science courses, emphasizing the interdependence of mankind, cover vast areas, human as well as geographic. The introductory Contemporary Civilization course shows freshmen how the major forces of Western Society appear in today's world. Choosing his group B course requirement, the student concentrates Machiavelli and Marx into more specific study. Psychology and Sociology analyze personal relationships — the former treating the individual, the latter the group; while Economics explores production of goods and services. Political Science emphasizes primarily international diplomatic relationships. History, the evolution of current situations from past problems. The concern of Education is the examination and evaluation of ideas transmitted from one generation to another.

Thus, studies in the social science division suggest that man can never attain individuality without recognizing his interdependence with mankind.
Whether the interest of a student lies in the determination of an integral, a precipitate, a gravitational force, or a muscular reaction, he will find stimulation toward this end in Middlebury's natural science division. This department's faculty stands ready to help each of us probe further the realm of "systematized knowledge of nature and the physical world" (Webster) that is natural science.

Professors of Biology, Chemistry, Drafting, Geology, Geography, Mathematics, and Physics combine in an effort to develop in us a systematic approach to problems to be analyzed — henceforth the challenge is ours. The challenge is mutual: evidenced by the rushing strides of these men as they flee to Willard daily at ten for their coffee break, in relative peace a street removed from the madding Stud-U crowds!

Long afternoons in the field, in the laboratories, at a calculating machine — all essential training for the rigorous requirements of natural science applied in today's world.
Included also in the Division of Natural Science are the departments of Physical Education and Home Economics. These fields concern the individual's development through recreation and exercise, and his ability to realize his needs through the resources of the home.

Physical Education provides training designed to develop in the student his coordination, mental discipline, sportsmanship, and leadership. Electives are offered presenting aids to future teaching or coaching of athletic events. The Home Economics department offers both men and women practical knowledge covering a variety of subjects, from food chemistry and preparation to principles of design and home furnishing.

Thus is provided experience to be utilized in future community life, whether for recreation or the home.

MILITARY SCIENCE

strengthens nation

Military training exists at Middlebury through its Army ROTC unit. Established six years ago, the Unit now boasts a full complement of ten cadre.

The Rifle Team, open to any Cadet, competes with national Army ROTC Units representing states and territories. The Guards, being a Cadet group formed to promote military interest, sponsors the annual Military Ball.

Thus Middlebury's Army ROTC Unit contributes to campus athletic and social aspects as well as to our nation's future security.

A part of cultural development is the discipline and training implicit in formal education. But another, and perhaps more important, aspect emerges: the enlightenment channelled through voluntary intellectual and aesthetic pursuits. Beyond the realm of required classes the College offers many and varied opportunities for growth.

Mr. Frost lectures, and the chapel is filled an hour before his scheduled appearance; extra chairs are brought in for the panel considering the implications of continuing nuclear experiments; ideas encouraged by the Religion Conference are avidly discussed. For the flash of an ID the Concert-lecture kaleidoscope unfolds, while a delegated fund brings the Abernathy lecture. Chapel speakers give their evenings to suggesting fresh channels of thought and investigation.

Undergraduates are presented with a many-sided cultural picture: they have only to resolve how much can be absorbed. In this encompassing opportunity for intellectual and aesthetic enlightenment lies the most valuable part of college experience.

exercise in leadership

In its first full year of co-educational government, the Undergraduate Assembly manifested the desire for growth of student responsibility on the Middlebury campus. By uniting forces, the Men's and Women's Executive Councils are striving to coordinate the functions of many committees and organizations previously left to drift by themselves.

A long range agenda has been planned by the Executive Council. Of primary importance this year was the question of adopting an academic honor system at Middlebury.

The Women's Judicial Council, primarily concerned with infractions of the honor system and social code, also works in conjunction with the Committee on Women's Activities in suggesting handbook revisions. In a parallel fashion, the Men's Judicial Council is responsible for enforcing and keeping up to date the various codes and regulations.

One of the primary sources of understanding among students, faculty, and administration is the Student Life Committee. Composed of campus leaders, S. L. C. approves the social calendars and constitutions of all student organizations. Desirous of reconciling undergraduate wishes with administration aims, S. L. C. devotes a major portion of its time to discussing campus problems.

Student Educational Policy Committee acts as an advisory board, making recommendations to the Faculty Educational Policy Committee and to the student government. It concerns itself with both the general educational program and specific courses and departmental procedures. Like the Executive Council and S.L.C., S. E. P. C.'s long range aim is an academic honor system.

Through a consolidated Undergraduate Assembly, Middlebury students strive to assume responsibility for their undergraduate activities. Co-operation and understanding among student, faculty, and administration, fostered by the Judicial Councils, S.L.C., and S.E.P.C. become even more essential if such a program is to be carried out effectively.

Carried away with community cause

SERVICE
FORUM  connects town ‘n’ gown

"No man is an island, entire of itself: every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main."

John Donne's words and the great responsibility which they imply echo throughout the purposes and goals of several Middlebury organizations.

Service to others, like many things, begins at home. For the Middlebury student it begins with the task of welcoming a newcomer to the campus. A phone call from the Director of Admissions brings a friendly Sophomore Guide on the run to show a visitor the ivy covered walls, Student Union checkers, and the most comfortable chair in the browsing room. Soon after his acceptance to and of Middlebury, the new member of the college community receives a letter from his Student Advisor who is "always at home” to the freshman and his problem. The freshman woman finds added guidance in the personage of an omni-present Junior Counselor.

Middlebury College is also “part of the main,” an integral part of a much larger community. Realizing the responsibilities of such membership, service organizations on campus have expanded to serve the town, national and international charities.

On the local level Women’s Forum looks to the needs of the town of Middlebury. Working through the Community House, Forum committees assist the townspeople in many activities and provide amusement for children and for patients in rest homes. Forum also maintains a thrift shop which provides warm clothes and toys for large and needy families. On campus, the organization is known for its two publications, "Forum Footnotes" and the Datebook, and for the familiar cry of "donuts for sale!" The Forum Board, composed of officers and committee chairmen, co-ordinates all these activities.

HELPING hand

The World University Service, Porter Hospital, the Red Cross Blood Program, and the National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students benefited from the annual Community Chest Drive.

Co-chairmen Penny Groll and Tony Robinson were kept busy counting the money rolling in from the dorm canvassing, the Fair, and the Ugly Man contest which proved to be the most spectacular to date.

Amid the bustle of studies and parties comes an occasional lull, a moment when the everyday activities of life seem empty. At such times, the spiritual need of mankind is most apparent to us. Through the worship services which they sponsor, the four Middlebury College religious associations attempt to fill the void. The Christian Association's Tuesday night vesper services, student conducted, give opportunity for religious readings and meditation. Jewish members of Hillel and visiting speakers conduct bi-monthly services. Readings from the Bible and the Christian Science Textbook unite another group of worshippers. The Rosary and special Lenten services are sponsored by Newman Club.

Religion is not reserved for moments of meditation, however. The religion conference, supported by all four organizations, expresses their conviction that religion is applicable to all of life. Philanthropic and social activities too, are forms of worship applied by these groups.

Worship, work, fellowship—the sense of religious togetherness spreads from moments such as these to penetrate all of life.

COMMUNICATION

A year of scientific progress outside the ivied walls has had its counterpart inside, in the publications and communications department. New policies have lifted the faces of Middlebury's publications—editors have been added to the Campus, "red-blooded" literary style has been subtracted from Frontiers, and the number of pictures has been multiplied in Kaleidoscope. In addition to newspaper coverage of changing college and world developments, Middlebury students received, through WRMC, up-to-the-minute reports on the high spots from satellite wanderings to ski-condition drifts.

Pencil stubs wore down, recording tapes wore out, and time wore on as thoughts and events were creatively expressed and carefully recorded. 1957-8—another year has passed by the Student Union homes of Campus, Frontiers, Kaleidoscope, and Radio Middlebury College, bringing here, too, the change that continues without cessation.

KALEIDOSCOPE—Editors: Urbach, Smith, Sprague, Coutant, Miner, Bryant.
“Published every Thursday during the college year,” as its masthead proclaims, the Campus keeps Middlebury students informed of current developments here and on other campuses. Eighty-eight undergraduates participate in the task of transforming news into copy and distributing the finished product.

On Thursday morning, with the posting of assignments, the news hounds move into action. Monday finds the editors, headed by Richard Woodworth, assembling copy and writing headlines. Thursday again, and the finished papers, fresh off the press, are being dispatched to dormitories and distant cities by Edward Sitts and his business staff. Earlier the same day, a new assignment list has found the door of the Campus office—work on the next issue has already begun.

"the new Campus has as many editors as the N.Y. Times and now publishes more weekly news about Middlebury than any paper including the Times!"

"Hurry!" "Picture ☺84!" "Captions!!" "Coffee?"
These are the 60 wpm thinkers at deadline time in the Kaleidoscope office. Middlebury’s annual covers a year’s undergraduate and faculty achievements, presenting a picture of college life to serve as a reminder in future years.

Editors, writers, artists, photographers, and business workers of Kaleid are students selected for their respective talents and for their willingness to sacrifice precious time and efforts to meet printer’s deadlines — or die at their typewriters! This year’s book brings innovations — more pictures on larger pages, in response to a survey of student wishes.

FRONTIERS, Middlebury’s bi-annual literary magazine, has again proved a successful outlet for the student with the creative mind. After much discussion this year of what type of mind was to be considered creative, editor Ron Friedland, ’59, announced a new policy for publication. Henceforth all literary styles would be considered for Frontiers rather than a predominance of the previously famous “pseudo-Bohemian” school which caused much adverse criticism on campus. The result has been a well-rounded, well-planned magazine of considerable literary merit and appeal to all student tastes.

WRMC

WRMC, Radio Middlebury College at 750 on your dial is now broadcasting for nine hours each day. This is just one aspect of the growth of Midd’s radio station since its creation in 1949.

A long line of homemade consoles has ended with the arrival of a second-hand commercial one. Some efficient shifting of space has created a studio for the library of about 2500 records as well as a Teletype room and a studio devoted to the impressive duty of compiling, editing, and broadcasting news.

Behind this activity is WRMC’s president, George Jackson, ’59, and a staff of fifty.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB—Macdonough, Hinsman, Milner, Loeb.

Middlebury students, contrary to popular belief, are very much aware of the world outside the sheltering Green Mountains. News of “Sputniks” and Senate investigating Committees manages to leak into our cozy valley via the wireless, newspaper concessions, and Time magazine.

Two Middlebury organizations take special interest in current national and international events.

On the national scene, the DEBATE CLUB has maintained its usual outstanding record by debating the topic “Resolved: that membership in a labor organization should not be compulsory as a requirement for employment.”

The INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB under the direction of Mr. Beauchesne lives up to its name by planning programs and discussions to bring international events to life on the quiet Middlebury campus. By promoting faculty and outside speakers, the club attempts to offer the student body an opportunity to understand the significance of the latest international developments.

Curtain going up on a new era of drama at Middlebury!

September 1957 ushered in many changes in the set-up of the student dramatic organizations. Players became an all new, streamlined and efficient, group of loyal, experienced thespians. Exalted to a strictly honorary position, Wig and Pen continued working side by side with Players to produce "Hamlet," a memorable masterpiece for Middlebury theater goers.

Winter Carnival brought "My Sister Eileen" before the footlights, and through it Players was firmly established in its new role. Springtime saw Players once again active, preparing for drama festivals, traveling, and producing the spring and graduation show.

Then the long awaited moment . . . curtain going up . . . opening night Wright Memorial Theater.

From Midd-Nite through caroling and step-singing to evening carillon, music is among Middlebury's cherished traditions, lending deeper meaning to everyday life. Varying objectives have formed our music groups, but common purpose unites them: to produce music both for personal enjoyment and for the continuation of Midd's musical tradition.

College Choir, under Jean Berger, sings in Wednesday and Sunday chapel services; also participating in the Christmas candlelight service and, with the Midd-drifts, in a spring program of contemporary music, including Berger's "Psalms of Penitence."

Midd-drifts — Women's Glee Club, directed by Pam Payne — specializes in secular music, enjoying a program with the Dartmouth Freshman Glee Club and a spring concert on Mead Chapel steps. Religious offerings included holiday chapel services, two of these with the Men's Glee Club. Having Frank Olney as its director, the men's group sings primarily for personal enjoyment.

More compact are the Dissipated Eight and the Missfits. Started about 1948 as a Slug House quartet, the Eight acquired a reputation which grew with the group. This year introduced rock-'n'-roll and the cutting of a record with RCA Victor, besides off-campus engagements including Bowdoin, Skidmore, and St. Lawrence.

The Missfits organized in 1956 to sing at the Freshman Dance. They arrange all their own num-

Primarily playing to create fall football spirit, the College Band also gave music for Middlebury's Hallowe'en parades. Following the marching season, the group becomes a wind ensemble. Directed by Mr. Foret, the student-managed concert band presented several outdoor spring concerts.

From Davy Jones Locker to the skies above — so ranged the activities of the Middlebury sports clubs. The Commodore’s Ball was held in ocean depths, while Yacht Club members skimmed the surface of many lakes in pursuit of trophies.

Keeping their feet on the ground was not the motto of the dance enthusiasts. Modern dance numbers and ballet were combined in the new spring presentation, “An Evening with Dance.” Choreography, costumes, and staging for the show were all done by Dance Club members.

In the sky above, the Flying Panthers demonstrated their skill in an air show. Besides actual flying, the club sponsored evening lectures on aspects of aviation.

through growth, ACHIEVEMENT ...

For students who have distinguished themselves in scholarship, leadership, and sportsmanship, recognition comes through membership in Middlebury's honor societies.

Blue Key, the largest of these organizations, is open to five sophomores, fifteen juniors, and five seniors. The Key acquaints incoming freshmen with the rules and traditions of Middlebury; it also participates in many other activities including the presentation of achievement awards and scholarships to undergraduate men.

Election to Mortar Board is the highest honor given a Middlebury woman. Their permanent responsibilities include a concession, participation in women's orientation, and an annual award to an outstanding sophomore woman.

Waubanakee, open to five seniors, recognizes the highest achievements of Middlebury men. Although purely an honorary organization, this year Waubanakee joined with Mortar Board to undertake the organization of a comprehensive social guidebook for incoming students, containing information on all aspects of Middlebury life.

Whether active or honorary, whether symbolized by mortar board, blue key, or tomahawk, membership in these organizations is the highest aim of the members of our college community.

To those who have dedicated themselves to the full development of their intellectual capacities, reward comes in the form of election to Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society. At twice-yearly installation ceremonies, the chapter at Middlebury, composed of professors and students, inducts those who have excelled in the academic life into this fraternity, which has no secrets or rituals, but only a common respect for intellectual fulfillment.
Midd's kaleidoscopic whirl of activity offers a great potential for growth.

panthers win five

One of the finest football teams to represent Middlebury College in recent years lived up to early season expectations by compiling a record of five wins, two losses and capturing the Vermont State Championship for the second consecutive year.

The Panthers opened the '57 season in spectacular fashion by downing Wesleyan 28-6. The day was completely Middlebury's as Dick Atkinson ran wild, scoring 3 TD's and gaining 190 yards.

Middlebury continued its winning ways, but with some difficulty, edging WPI 7-3. The Panthers had to come from behind scoring finally in the 4th period on a 14 yard aerial from Aldrich to Atkinson.

Homecoming weekend at Porter Field saw Middlebury throw a real scare into a favored Williams team. Midd began well, and led at halftime 19-12 on three long touchdowns, all over 60 yards, two by Dick Atkinson and one by Dave Barenborg.

The following game saw an underrated Bates team completely bottle up Midd's offense and take a surprise 13-7 victory. Even in defeat the Panther forward wall of Bill French, Dick Fusco, Herb Thomas, Bob Batal, Bill Ryan, Tom Cornick and Milt Peterson was outstanding, stopping Bates three separate times within the 10 yard line.
An aroused Panther eleven got back on the winning track trouncing RPI by a score of 41-0. Particularly impressive was Pete Aldrich who scored a touchdown and completed 7 out of 9 passes. Fine performances were also turned in by Midd in the persons of Jim Wright, Sam Gualtieri and Breck Lardner.

Middlebury's first obstacle to a Vermont State Championship was easily overcome as the Panthers overpowered Norwich 39-12. A combination of Pete Aldrich and fine line play paced Midd to victory.
The final game of the season saw Middlebury confront one of its most stubborn foes, UVM. Overcoming an early Midd touch down the Catamounts had tied the Panthers and were holding on in the closing minutes of the last period. With ever-increasing suspense Midd marched to the UVM 14 only to be stalled on three downs. On the fourth down the Panthers suddenly broke through and scored on a pass play from Aldrich to Atkinson which was masterminded by quarterback, John Mentor.

The 1957 season saw the Panthers play consistently good ball which culminated in the Vermont State Championship game with UVM. Especially proud of this record should be co-captains Milt Peterson and Dick Fusco, and seniors Bob Batal, Tim Mason, and Jim Witham, whose last season at Middlebury was indeed a satisfying one.

Football Squad
With a record of seven wins and only one loss, Coach Tom Reynolds' soccer squad enjoyed its finest season in the sport's brief history at Middlebury. The teamwork and outstanding play of several freshmen served to spark an otherwise veteran team.

The booters opened the season against Clark in a game that saw the Panthers emerge victorious. Freshmen Tor Hultgreen and Alex Goripow were the outstanding players of this 1957 opener. Due to constantly improving teamwork Middlebury rang up wins against Union and Clarkson. Captain Rich Miner, Gil Partch, and Scott Greer were the mainstays in these games with consistently good play. The hopes for an undefeated season went out the window when the Panthers were edged out by Lowell Tech. It was a close game by score, and closer by play, with the fine efforts of Bob Hall, Frank Hurt, and Dave Collins going to no avail. Quickly however, Midd bounced back by downing Plattsburg and Hillyer in closely contested games. Goalies John Nichols and Dick Johnson were instrumental in both victories. Without a sign of letup, the Panthers met and defeated Albany and U. S. C. G. to close out an altogether fine season.

With the return of high scorer Tor Hultgreen, John Conradi, Bruce Richards, and Captain-elect Dave Collins, Middlebury hopes for an undefeated season in '58 may well be fulfilled.

Good headwork sparks Clarkson game

Midd's teamwork and outstanding individual play gave high hopes for an undefeated season.
Although Middlebury has almost always sported excellent hockey teams, this year's will certainly remain in the minds of the local hockey fans as one of our very best. Opening against a comparatively weak Bowdoin team the Panthers showed an enthusiastic home crowd that they were going to be a team to be reckoned with for the next three months. Freshmen Frank Coy, Tor Hultgreen, Jerry Fryberger and Bobby Fryberger particularly impressed everyone in this one.

Against St. Lawrence our fine scoring punch was coupled with excellent defensive play on the part of Tracy Perry, Jim Witham, Gerry Lenz, and Bill Ryan. In the next two games the Panther Skaters were stopped by Dartmouth and R. P. I. in closely contested contests. A week later Goalie Frankie Costanzo held a high scoring Northeastern club to but one goal while Midd tallied seven. However on the following night a well rounded Harvard team
icemen see top season

trounced Middlebury by exactly the reverse of that score. The Cadets of Army were the first victims in a Panther win streak that was not to be broken for nine straight games.

In an extended victory series like this one it is difficult to single out any particular player for praise, but one certainly must cite the scoring punch of Phil Latreille, Mike Karin, Captain Ken Kouri, Dick Morrison, and Pete Bostwick as being instrumental in many of these wins.

It took the first ranked team in the East to finally bring the Middlebury winning streak to its climax. After two close periods the powerful Boston University team finally opened up a decisive lead in the last twenty minutes of play. As this report goes to press the Panther team has posted a record of twelve wins and only four losses against some of the best teams in the United States.

Senior lettermen Tom Burr, Herb Urbach, and Pete Coe.
The 1958 basketball team under the direction of Coach Stub Mackey showed the fans some exciting basketball although victories were few and far between. This can basically be attributed to the high caliber of competition met during the season.

The Panthers opened against Union College and were handed a defeat 61 to 78. Outstanding play by sophomore Howie Wiley and senior Carl Scheer kept the margin small. Pete Coe was high man for Midd against a powerful Harvard quintet but again to no avail. Middlebury bounced back in their fourth game to defeat the MIT engineers 81 to 75. Howie Wiley and Herb Urbach were instrumental in achieving this first victory of the season. Strong Northeastern and UVM teams bested Midd in the next two games, but hallplayers such as Charlie Rand and Dick Polzello showed up well in these efforts. Our second victory came against St. Lawrence on our home court. Carl Scheer and Scott Greer along with fine team play brought this win. Against Bates and Amherst the team played perhaps their best games of the year but lost both in spirited contests. In the next game victory came again, this time over Wesleyan. Fine defense and excellent play by Dave Barenborg and Tom Burr helped score the victory. After three successive losses the Panthers defeated Norwich 97 to 84 in a triple overtime Carnival thriller. Brad Dunbar, Charlie Rand, and Carl Scheer led Middlebury in this battle royal. Although the Panthers were unsuccessful in their last six outings, the home fans saw some good basketball. This was particularly true in the final game of the '58 season when the quintet threw a real scare into the NCAA bound St. Michael's team. In this game as throughout the season, the spirited team play of seniors Pete Coe, Herb Urbach, Tom Burr and Co-captains Carl Scheer and Scott Greer was of great value to the team.

MEN'S SKI TEAM boasts good record

The men's skiing team initiated its season by winning an invitational cross-country meet at Jackson, New Hampshire. Pete Lahdenpera led the Panthers, placing first.

Middlebury's next outing was the Stowe Cup Meet, open to individual but not team entries. Coach Bobo Sheehan placed second in the downhill with Frank Hurt and Jim Southard finishing third and fourth respectively.

At the Putney Meet the following week, Middlebury gained the satisfaction of defeating Dartmouth. Lahdenpera, Hurt and Kjekshus all placed among the top ten contestants.

The first complete team effort of the season was the Lyndonville Meet from which Middlebury emerged victorious, capturing 599.64 out of a possible 600 points. Especially outstanding were Hurt in the cross-country and slalom, Kjekshus and Manley in the jumping, and Southard in the downhill.

Middlebury's biggest disappointment of the season occurred at its own carnival where it finished a close second to Dartmouth, despite the fine efforts of Hurt, Thomas and Lahdenpera.

Not allowing defeat to discourage them, the Panthers rebounded the following week, winning the Norwich Carnival. Performing well for Middlebury were Southard and Thomas in the downhill, Hurt and Southard in the slalom, Lahdenpera and Hurt in the cross-country and Thomas and Lamson in the jumping.

WOMEN'S SKI TEAM captures honors

The women skiers of Middlebury College virtually romped over all opposition in three team meets and several individual competitions.

Middlebury Winter Carnival was the first team effort and saw the Panthers' A and B teams place first and third respectively. Highlighting the meet was Renie Cox's first, Debbie Davis' third and Sue Goodwin's fifth in the combined.

At the McGill Carnival, Middlebury finished twenty-two points ahead of runner-up UVM, as Renie Cox swept both the downhill and the slalom.

Team activity was successfully concluded with the UVM Ski Meet. There Renie Cox captured first place in the downhill, while Debbie Davis picked up a third in that event and a victory in the slalom as well.

In the area of individual competition, Renie Cox performed with consistent brilliance winning firsts in the Gibson Invitational, the Kate Smith Invitational, the Fiske U.S.E.A.S.A., and Women's Giant Slalom.

One of the most valuable organizations at Middlebury College is the Ski Patrol. It is a highly competitive student organization dedicated to the promotion of skiing safety. Throughout the ski season at Middlebury’s Snow Bowl, members of the Patrol make frequent runs of all trails, constantly on the alert for injured skiers. Because the stringent membership requirements of the Ski Patrol demand superior skiing ability and a thorough knowledge of first aid, Patrol members are able to confront emergencies on the trails with speed and efficiency. At present, the Patrol consists of approximately twenty members each of whom makes a valuable contribution to better skiing at Middlebury.

In its finest season in many a year, the Middlebury baseball team posted an overall record of nine wins and five losses. The Panther nine played consistently good baseball with the favorable spring weather proving to be a great benefit.

Although their first three games were on the road, the team managed to pull one game out due to a fine pitching effort by Carl Scheer. In the next six games Midd hopes began looking up as the Panthers blasted in succession: Williams, Union, Clarkson, Norwich, A.I.C., and St. Michael's. Fine hitting led by Bobby Ray, Rog Tirone, Ted Mooney, and Captain Jim Wagner, proved to be overpowering for the opposition in each of these contests. In the next game against our traditional rival U.V.M., the Panthers met their Waterloo. However, the team fought back in the following games thanks to the steady play of Keith Dollar, Zing Rausa, and Tom Burr.

Middlebury closed out its season by topping a powerful Vermont team mainly due to a brilliant performance by Pete Read. In this game as in others throughout the season, the hitting of Bobby Ray was of great aid.

Along with the return of some of its most outstanding hitting stars, the team retains most of its pitching staff lead by Captains Carl Scheer and Gerry Lenz. With these men already signed, chances are good for an even better team in 1958.

Teamwork and individual effort combined to produce top season in 1957.

The 1957 season was generally disappointing for the Middlebury track team as the Panthers were able to win but one of their five dual meet contests. Despite this record, the team did demonstrate some excellent potential which should show itself in the seasons to come. Middlebury possessed a host of versatile underclassmen who performed with continuing improvement throughout the season. To name a few, there were Andy Ford and Sumner Webber in the sprints, John Nichols, Jack McEwan and Pete Redman in long distance running, John Greenwood and Pete Aldrich in the field events and Rich Miner in the hurdles.

Several specific demonstrations of this potential were Ted Parker's new Middlebury College record in the javelin, Midd's victory over Norwich and a second place in the Vermont State meet.
Primarily due to the calibre of the opposition and our own lack of experience, the Middlebury lacrosse team wound up on the losing end in most of its games. However, improvement could definitely be seen in the latter games of the season, which gives promise for the future. Such underclassmen as: John Mentor, Bill French, Dick Bartlett, and Don Booth, bore the brunt of the attack during the season.

Hopes are high that this nucleus, led by captains Floreal Lavin and Bruce Barlow, will reverse this years record in 1958.

Teamwork counts even more in a losing season.
Middlebury’s 1957 golf team was characterized by several notable achievements which all together made the season a highly successful one. First, the Panthers compiled a record of five wins and four losses. Outstanding in this area were Don Sanders and Mike Closson, both defeated but once. Second, Middlebury finished a close runnerup in N.F.I.G.A. competition with Paul Wise and John Kerestezy placing in the top sixteen out of some two-hundred contestants. Finally, the linksmen rounded out the season by winning the Vermont State Championship for the second consecutive year.
TENNIS 1957

Coach Lockwood Merriman registered his seventh consecutive winning season as a good 1957 Middlebury tennis team won five of nine matches. Midd’s victories included U.S.C.G., Clarkson, Union and UVM twice. In addition, Middlebury reached the quarter-finals of NEILTA championships.

Pacing the Panther attack throughout the season were Pete Bostwick, Bill Breed, Seab Brady, Bruce Cameron, and Ed Sommers. Particularly outstanding in this area was the doubles team of Bill Breed and Pete Bostwick which dropped but one match in regular season play and for the second consecutive year got to the quarter-finals in the NEILTA competition.

As for team efforts, it is curious that the Panthers performed best in two losing matches against RPI and Wesleyan. In both of these contests, Middlebury’s spirit and balance was especially evident.

With essentially the same personnel returning for ’58 future Panther tennis fortunes indeed look promising.

FRATERNITIES
PANHELLENIC AND INTERFRATERNITY COUNCILS

Maintaining Middlebury fraternity and sorority effectiveness in scholastic, philanthropic, social, and athletic pursuits is the aim of the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils. Community Chest Fair participation and mixed social functions afford opportunities for work and recreation; competition is encouraged by athletic trophies and scholarship awards. Clearing social calendars, and philanthropic and money-earning projects through the councils prevents duplication. Conflicts and misunderstandings are minimized by evaluation and revision of rushing regulations. Steps toward simpler, more effective rushing programs are the deferred first-semester system for the men and a shorter sorority schedule.

If fraternities and sororities are to contribute their utmost to campus and community, as well as to their own members, cooperation must prevail. A firm central government foundation through effective use of the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils can make this goal a reality.

the flavor of a football weekend

Once upon a time, the idea occurred to someone to extend the football afternoon to the Football Weekend, to help pass the long Autumn evenings. And he said, “Let there be two Main Football weekends, — Homecoming and The Traditional Rivalry, — and other Lesser Football weekends.

“Let Homecoming have Alumni, and be highlighted by the joyful Commodore's Ball. Let the fraternities throw parties on all weekends, and let their houses be decorated to extol the name of Fun. Let The Traditional Rivalry be ushered in by a successful Community Chest Carnival, and let The Ape reign repulsive.

“And let the Asian Flu Season run concurrently with the Season of Football Weekends, to test the Spirit of the people. And if they pass the test, and enjoy themselves in spite of it, let them be successful in The Traditional Rivalry.”

And it came to pass that they were successful in The Traditional Rivalry....

"Hello, Batt North? . . . Alice Mac Allister, please . . . Hello Alice? Hey, what are you doing Saturday night? . . . Oh, you're busy . . . You can always think up something pretty good for these big weekends. First there was Woodsmen's Weekend, but you told me at the last minute you didn't have blanket permission and left me out on a limb. Then you were going Home for Homecoming, but I'm sure I saw you waving the gold and purple on the Williams' stands. On Parents' Weekend you were afraid your parents wouldn't like me, but I didn't mind too much, because with 800 parents it's hard to be alone.

U.V.M. Weekend was really too much — you said you had a date with the catamount. And now you're going to Military Ball with a Norwich cadet . . . Oh, I should ask you farther ahead? . . . Well, what about Carnival . . . Hello? Hello? Operator, this line seems to have gone dead!"

(Editor's note on the above conversation: Sorry old boy, according to our computations you seem to have missed three bonfires, three games, three dances, assorted jazz concerts and woodcutting sprees, not to mention a possible fifty cocktail parties. Better luck next time.)

Fall at Middlebury brings brilliantly colored leaves patterned against the clear blue of Vermont skies. So the autumn cultural program leaves its mark on our hours of educational development. The red maples swayed as students considered the role of sex in life or listened to Colonel Limb, Korean ambassador. Oaks blossomed yellow to the strains of Alfred Deller's trio and the Paganini String Quartet; Istomin played against a background of orange elms. Both nature and man combined in presenting the intellectual and aesthetic beauties inherent in life.

This is Cow Country. Time, 9:08 A.M. A complaint came into HQ that a prowler was crashing parties. My job: find him. My name is Marmaduke. I'm a cop.

9:36 A.M. Our slim leads all ended in thin air. We were getting discouraged when suddenly the phone shrilled and a hot tip came through! The prowler had dashed by the Forum party with a large parcel, presumably stolen six packs.

12:59 P.M. Waded through milling herds of kids in search of clues. Nothing. Only a bit of irrelevant red flannel in the fireplace flue. At 3:12 P.M. a fraternity job was pulled, but all we could get from the youngsters was a statement about something pounding on the roof.

“And this is your partner for the next fifteen minutes”

10:32 P.M. He crashed another fraternity house and stayed for eggnogs. The guests were bribed to keep quiet, but a squealer tipped us off. We arrived at 11:55 P.M. and with tense determination stole upstairs. There in the hall lay a dirty red suit with a hole in the pants. Beyond that were boots and the hot beer. Against a closed door curled a moth-eaten beard.

Guns drawn, we burst into the room. Sprawled on the bed was the joker we sought — the notorious Fraternity Santa.
Dear Diary,

Well, Carnival is finally over. What a tough weekend! Thursday I missed the skiing and basketball game, but Danny, my date, went by the infirmary window with my roommate and waved. I hated having to finesse the Ice Show and play, so later sneaked out. That combo ticket a departing senior left the nurse covered my escape pretty well. "My Sister

The big Snow gave them that lo-o-ng weekend reign.

Carnival requisites: energy, in quantity sufficient to carry us from enivigorating action on the slopes through fancy footwork on the dance floor, and still save some for Saturday.
Eileen" and the Ice Show were excellent! (Must inform the parents that a trip to Europe would be terribly educational.)

Friday was cold but had plenty of beautiful sky, snow, and rays. Naturally I had to run down a tree on Proctor! It didn’t ruin the Valentine Ball though. I wore a cast that matched my dress, and from crutch corner the king and queen looked really nice. I think Danny had a good time too. It was thoughtful of my roommate to dance with him.

No half-hearted attempt for first-prize Sig Eps.

We’re glad she’s the cox of Midd’s crew.

Through the gates; don’t wait for the green light.
Yesterday's events are hazy. I remember enjoying the jumping, even though Dartmouth won all the hardware. Then a fraternity party, and . . . . The Klondike Rush was fun, but Danny was in a hurry to leave. I saw him and my roommate later, but I was with Tom somebody. He's going to call me tomorrow.

There's a blizzard now and squadrons of imports are stuck here. That guy who bought an import from his friend is sure paying more than he bargained for. Meanwhile, I'm back in the infirmary. Guess I should have left Mrs. Pete a ticket to a fraternity house on Saturday night!

Still going strong; hearts in tune on Valentine's Eve.

Midwinter at Middlebury: a season for skiing, skating, studying; Carnival time, fraternity kegs. The collegiate whirlpool pulls us all into its frantic vortex, leaving little time for independent reflection.

But intellectual and cultural growth is yet present, quietly demanding that we “know the best that has been said and thought in the world.” To attain this end we learn to reach out beyond the classroom, directly absorbing a perception that will include the entire race of man.

In meeting this internationalism inherent in culture, the College brings many accomplished personalities into our mountain isolation, artists who offer us a philosophical understanding of fields beyond our immediate range of experience. Paul Doktor, famed violinist; Richard Dyer-Bennett, “minstrel by trade;” the Abernathy speaker; these and others provide cultural growth, the sole province of man.

A crescendo of virtuosity — Paul Doktor.

Who contends that college students lock themselves up in an ivory tower for four years? 1958’s Culture Conference with the topic “A Critical Evaluation of United States Foreign Policy,” was designed to shatter complacent walls and present a picture of political reality.

Snowstorms crippled New England, but our speakers struggled through them to arrive despite the hazards of Vermont transportation. Adam Clayton Powell made his entrance in time to lead a vigorous attack (between mouthfuls of sandwich and sips of coffee); Robert McCollum of the State Department defended. Harlan Cleveland and Philip Cummins, unaffected by the blustering weather or the internal government, found their issues in Southeast Asia. Howard Cook was caught in the middle as moderator.

Students stoically gave up a weekend of skiing to hear the speeches and discussions. The conference workers and guests concluded on a more social level, with a banquet Saturday evening.
Host to several Carnivals, Middlebury finally experienced a three ring circus!

Pre-show parades featured royalty instead of elephants (Dorrie Landry floated in as Queen), no Sousa band performed (George Lewis furnished hot music), and we had no trapeze act (swinging and swaying was courtesy of Lester Lanin), but nobody seemed to mind. If we weren't as big as Barnum and Bailey, we were more personal.

Our sideshows and clowns (names intentionally omitted) were as good as anybody's; there was even a calliope to let off steam. The Payne Singers troupe carried off first honors before crewmen collapsed the tents housing '59's Great Circus.

Comprehensives over, exams completed — only graduation week remains ... a week of gaiety and fun, fiascoes and good times ... last "field trips" to Dunmore, the quarry, Bittersweet, the Cascades ... rain or shine, the warm satisfaction that accompanies days of leisure ... traditions remain: the Daisy Chain and the passing on of Painter's cane to junior women ... Sunday morning pause to collect thought and hopes ... impressive, long remembered finales of Commencement.

ceremony and tradition as the finale
“Tired but triumphant!” to describe the feeling of Midd seniors who step down from the fieldhouse platform to freedom, responsibility, the unknown. Having successfully stood the culminating test of four years’ work, their comprehensives, they are now prepared to make their mark in the world. Emerging from the beautiful protective Green Mountains, down to the busy sidewalks of cosmopolitan centers, they soon leave Midd life behind.

Is there nostalgia and sadness at leaving? Or will they part with eagerness and anticipation? Commencement Day arrives, and parents and friends converge to see them grasp that sheaf of paper from Dr. Stratton’s hand, and receive his congratulations. What lies behind it? Well, a long time ago they trepidly approached the Battells or Hepburn, filled with illusions and energy. Four years later, they have emerged, toned and tempered by many hard knocks and enlightening experiences. Hesitantly they leave behind their good friends and college security, but with anticipation they step forward to test their acquired abilities, whether in business, graduate school, or marriage.

How many acts make a good play?

So far, this one has had four, the last being the construction of the Wright Memorial Theatre. The three other acts to this real-life drama were the building of Middlebury’s Center Battell, Ice Rink at the Field House and the recently-completed Stewart Hall.

As with most good plays, this one has had a number of stars: Middlebury’s administrators who ordered the work so that you and future students would have a more complete college education, the entire student body which has been understanding of the construction inconveniences, and in the wings, R. S. Noonan, (Midd., ’21), whose firm did the work, and who wishes everyone the best of luck with Middlebury’s newly expanded modern facilities.
